This Week At Cedars

Sunday Service, March 9
10:00 am

We Are Called

Rev. Carol McKinley, Guest Minister
Gregory Cook, Worship Associate

The architect, philosopher and futurist R. Buckminster Fuller wrote, "We are called to be architects of the future, not its victims." In our changing world, that call has become increasingly urgent: when we hear it, how can we respond in ways that help create the future we hope to see?

The Reverend Carol McKinley, now retired, lives in Olympia and is an affiliated community minister with Olympia UU Congregation, where she coordinated that congregation's Faith in Action Ministry. Her passion for justice activism was nurtured by the Edmonds Unitarian Universalist Church, which she joined in the mid-1960s.

Upcoming Service

Sunday Service, March 16
10:00 am

Spiritual Life as an Ecotone

Dr. Jennifer Wilhoit, PhD., Guest Speaker
Mike Cox, Worship Associate

This talk will focus on the potent inner/outer landscape: the intersection between who we feel we are internally and how we behave in the world. As areas of confluence in the natural world, ecotones are especially rich in biodiversity. Viewing ecotones as a concept, we can begin to apply their value in human contexts – in particular, to guide us in how we conceive of our spiritual lives and how we enact that out in the world as inextricably interconnected ecological beings in the web of life.

Jennifer J. Wilhoit, Ph.D. is a Spiritual Ecologist, published author, interfaith practitioner, hospice volunteer, and the founder of TEALabor stories. She compassionately supports people's creative and healing processes by drawing from nature's wisdom. Jennifer is a long-time active member of the global compassion, interfaith, and gratitude movements. www.tealarborstories.com
